

The Rabbit: A Traditional Story -- Thanks to Story Teller Hugh Lupton

In the south of Oregon, near Lake of the Woods, young John Jones was walking through the forest. As he walked, he enjoyed the fresh air and the tall green (1) _____. He came to an open field. The grass was smooth, flowing, (2) _____ soft. He could see the sky. It was deep, blue, and (3) _____. Round clouds floated by like ships in the sea.

they will work on my ranch. But (11) _____ will be lazy boys, and they will like to sleep too (12) _____. I will have to wake them up in the mornings. 'Hey (13) _____ Wake up. It's time for work.'" And with that, the rabbit (14) _____ the field ran away... And so did the dreams of (15) _____ John Jones.

What do you dream about?

Then he (4) _____ a big rabbit in the grass. And he thought. "If I (5) _____ the rabbit, I can sell it to the hat maker. Then (6) _____ can buy pigs. The pigs will have babies, and I can (7) _____ them to the meat seller. With the money, I can buy (8) _____. The cows will have babies, and I can start a big (9) _____.

I will become rich and then marry Elisabeth Smith. We will (10) _____ two strong boys, and

THINK ABOUT IT

1. What is the point of this story?

- A. Rabbits are hard to catch.
- B. We should live in peace with nature.
- C. It's hard to get rich.
- D. We must act on our dreams.

2. Retell this story to a friend or partner.

3. What would you buy if you caught and sold the rabbit?

WORD FOCUS: LIST NEW OR HARD WORDS

verbal

He's a  person. He talks a lot.

Beeoasis Step

SE

1

>> 2 <<

3

4

5